

Congress passes spending deal to keep government open another week

The short-term spending agreement to keep the federal government open for another week was approved overwhelmingly. House and Senate negotiators are expected to work through the weekend to finalize a longer-term deal that would fund the government through the end of the fiscal year in September.

North Korea test-fires missile amid high tensions with U.S.

South Korea’s Joint Chiefs of Staff said North Korea has test-fired a missile from the western part of its country. North Korea routinely test-fires a variety of ballistic missiles, despite United Nations prohibitions, as part of its push to develop a long-range ballistic missile capable of hitting U.S. shores.

This is how Trump looks out for the people who voted for him

It wasn’t pleas from foreign leaders or CEOs that prompted the president to change his mind about NAFTA. It was a map of the United States that apparently proved decisive in the tug of war between the populists and the globalists inside the administration.

Alone in the White House, Trump is enjoying the perks of his new home

He enjoys leading guests on trivia-filled tours. He brags about the specialties of the White House chefs. But the fact that Trump entertained a dinner party, which included Ted Nugent and Sarah Palin, for four hours last week may indicate his hunger for company.

Trump now agrees with the majority of Americans: He wasn’t ready to be president

At no point over the course of the 2016 campaign did a majority polled think that Donald Trump would be qualified on Day 1. “This is more work than in my previous life,” he said this week. “I thought it would be easier. ... I do miss my old life.”

The latest bad economic news isn’t Trump’s fault, but he has made it his problem

The downside for Trump is that though the economy may be sound, it’s not roaring, and a host of longer-term factors mean it’s unlikely to hit rocket growth any time soon.

Pulitzer Prize-winning reporting: Uncovering Trump

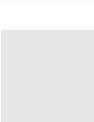

In February 2016, presidential candidate Donald Trump promised $6 million in donations, including $1 million from his own pocket, to charities along his campaign trail. Months later, he had donated far less than he pledged. Post reporter David A. Fahrenthold went in search of the missing money and found a bigger story than he ever expected.
