

The French elections showed the strength of the European far-right — and its limits
The past few months have seen a quiet revenge of the center.
by Zack Beauchamp

A new tell-all about the Clinton campaign is a searing indictment of the candidate herself Shattered is the inside account of how Hillary Clinton's team was aimless from before its very first rally.
by Jeff Stein

France's best hope against a far-right takeover is an inexperienced former banker Emmanuel Macron is just 39, has never been elected, and represents the global elite. Can he beat Marine Le Pen?
by Sarah Wildman

Donald Trump is obsessed with winning, and that's why he's losing
He needs to learn the difference between small victories and big ones.

Rich charities keep getting richer. That means your money isn't doing as much good as it could.
Even in the resistance-to-Trump era, philanthropy is a zero-sum game.
by Marc Gunther

Marine Le Pen is trying to win the French elections with a subtler kind of xenophobia
How France's far-right presidential candidate is rebranding her party.
