

House GOP narrowly passes bill to overhaul health-care system

Republicans claim major victory, but bill falls short of long-held party goals

- Under intense pressure to show they can govern, House Republicans pushed through the legislation, which makes dents in portions of the Affordable Care Act but falls short of repealing it outright.
- Although the 217-213 vote represented a significant if incomplete political victory for President Trump, the measure will not meet his promise of “insurance for everybody.”

While the House GOP celebrates, the Senate prepares to make its own health-care bill

Republican senators are signaling that their strategy will be to effectively craft their own legislation, but it’s unclear whether they will be able to resolve their stark differences on health care.

Republicans didn’t like their bill but voted for it anyway

They knew it would give Democrats ammunition and that the Senate may choke on the legislation, but they wanted to show that the GOP majority could actually govern.

Pulitzer Prize-winning reporting: Uncovering Trump

In February 2016, presidential candidate Donald Trump promised $6 million in donations, including $1 million from his own pocket, to charities along his campaign trail. Months later, he had donated far less than he pledged. Post reporter David A. Fahrendthold went in search of the missing money and found a bigger story than he ever expected.

Filmmakers are making their soundtracks do all the work, and it's getting a little lazy

Music should be used to add layers of environmental and emotional information. But too often, pop hits are employed simply for nostalgia appeal and self-congratulation.
