

Trump administration poised to expand military role against the Taliban in Afghanistan

The plan, which still must be approved by the president, would be a major shift in strategy that effectively puts the United States back on a war footing with the Taliban. It would authorize the Pentagon, not the White House, to set troop numbers in Afghanistan and give the military far broader authority to use airstrikes to target the militants. It is part of a larger effort to push a resurgent Taliban back to the negotiating table, officials said.

Yates says she warned White House that Flynn could be blackmailed

Former acting attorney general Sally Yates testified at a Senate hearing that she expected White House officials to “take action” on her January warning that then-national security adviser Michael Flynn was “compromised by the Russians.” The retired general stayed on at the White House for 18 days after Yates’s warning. After the hearing, President Trump tweeted that Yates “said nothing but old news.”

Obama personally advised Trump against hiring Flynn, official says

President Obama delivered his warning on Nov. 10, two days after the election, when President-elect Trump visited the White House. Michael Flynn, who was fired as head of the Defense Intelligence Agency in 2014, was later forced out as Trump’s national security adviser after spending just 24 days in that position.

A TV company warned viewers about ‘fake news.’ Now it’s buying some of the nation’s biggest stations.

Two months before Monday’s announcement that Sinclair Broadcast Group would acquire Tribune Media, the company sent out a “must-run” piece echoing a frequent complaint of President Trump. While other station owners also push “must-runs,” Sinclair appears unique for what analysts see as a political slant.

Pulitzer Prize-winning reporting: Uncovering Trump

In February 2016, presidential candidate Donald Trump promised $6 million in donations, including $1 million from his own pocket, to charities along his campaign trail. Months later, he had donated far less than he pledged. Post reporter David A. Fahrenthold went in search of the missing money and found a bigger story than he ever expected.
