- A photograph of a busy trading floor, likely the New York Stock Exchange. In the foreground, a man in a dark suit and patterned tie is wearing a headset and looking intently at a tablet computer. Behind him, a dense crowd of other traders, mostly men in business attire, are also wearing headsets and looking in various directions, some towards the camera and others towards the trading screens in the background. The background is filled with numerous electronic display screens showing financial data, charts, and news. The overall atmosphere is one of intense activity and focus.
