

Congress reaches deal to keep government open through Sept.

The bipartisan agreement includes policy victories for Democrats, whose votes will be necessary to pass the measure in the Senate, as well as $12.5 billion in new military spending and $1.5 billion more for border security requested by Republican leaders in Congress. The agreement follows weeks of tense negotiations between Democrats and GOP leaders after President Trump insisted on funding for a new border wall and later dropped that demand.

After hard-left turn, Britain's Labour Party is on course for a historic defeat

With less than six weeks until Britons go to the polls again, the Labour Party appears headed for a broad, deep electoral beatdown. It may offer a cautionary tale for Democrats in the United States.

At the border, Trump's tactics of fear appear to be working

The number of migrants crossing into the United States has dropped markedly since Trump took office, and experts attribute at least part of this shift to the use of sharp rhetoric, enforcement raids and public spotlighting of crimes committed by immigrants.

God, guns and Russia: How the GOP right found allies in Moscow

From gun rights to terrorism to same-sex marriage, many leading advocates on the right who grew frustrated with their country's leftward tilt under President Barack Obama have forged ties with well-connected Russians and come to see Vladimir Putin as a potential ally.

In a deep-red state ruled by Koch money, can yard sales help Democrats win?

Although they lost the election to take Mike Pompeo's seat in Congress, Democrats were invigorated to see that Sedgwick County, home of Republican mega-donor Charles Koch, voted for their candidate for the first time in decades. Now they're working to build on that momentum, one yard sale at a time.

A dinner for Supreme Court justices at the White House? That could get awkward.

It's unclear whether the justices will dine at the executive mansion after the event was scrubbed from the president's schedule. If they do ever get together, there would be plenty to talk about — or, perhaps, to avoid.

Pulitzer Prize-winning reporting: Uncovering Trump

In February 2016, presidential candidate Donald Trump promised $6 million in donations, including $1 million from his own pocket, to charities along his campaign trail. Months later, he had donated far less than he pledged. Post reporter David A. Fahrenthold went in search of the missing money and found a bigger story than he ever expected.
