

FBI Director Comey says he feels 'mildly nauseous' about chance he affected election

James Comey gave his most exhaustive defense yet of his role in politically sensitive investigations, telling a Senate panel that despite his feelings, he had no regrets regarding his decisions about a probe into Hillary Clinton's emails.

By Devlin Barrett and Karoun Demirjian • 40 minutes ago

House approves roughly $1.1 trillion spending bill, paving the way for Senate to meet Friday deadline

The measure to fund the government through September, which includes more than $1.5 billion in additional defense spending and $1.5 billion for border security, is expected to come up for a vote later this week in the Senate.

By Kelsey Snell • 1 hour ago

Republicans seeking support for health-care plan push to address preexisting conditions

Rep. Fred Upton, who came out against the earlier revision on Tuesday, is the author of the latest amendment that provides more financial assistance for people with preexisting conditions.

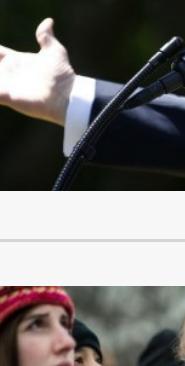

By Sean Sullivan, David Weigel and Paige Winfield Cunningham

• @PKCapitol: Upton serves notice that moderates might be a force to reckon with

If more than 22 House Republicans vote "no," the latest version of the health-care reform bill will fail. Here's where things stand:

20	36	22
Opposed or leaning "no"	Undecided or unclear	Switched to "yes"

Opinions

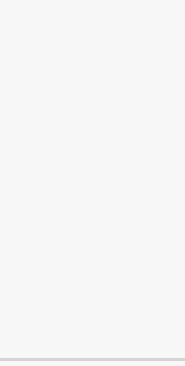

Putin requested his call with Trump to outline a plan for Syrian safe zones. Why now?

By David Ignatius

Thanks to this agency, we identified an unknown copy of the Declaration of Independence

By Danielle Allen

Republicans try yet another health care fig leaf

By Jennifer Rubin

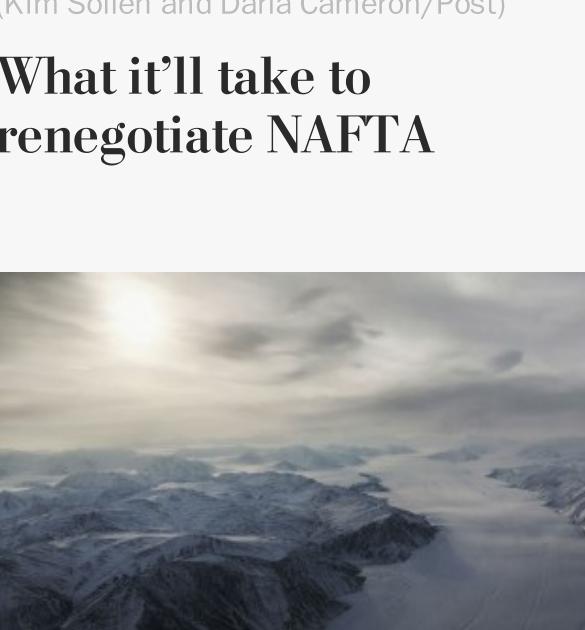

More Top Stories

Theresa May makes explosive charge: E.U. officials are meddling in Britain's upcoming election

Tensions between the continent and Britain have escalated over looming talks about the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the European Union.

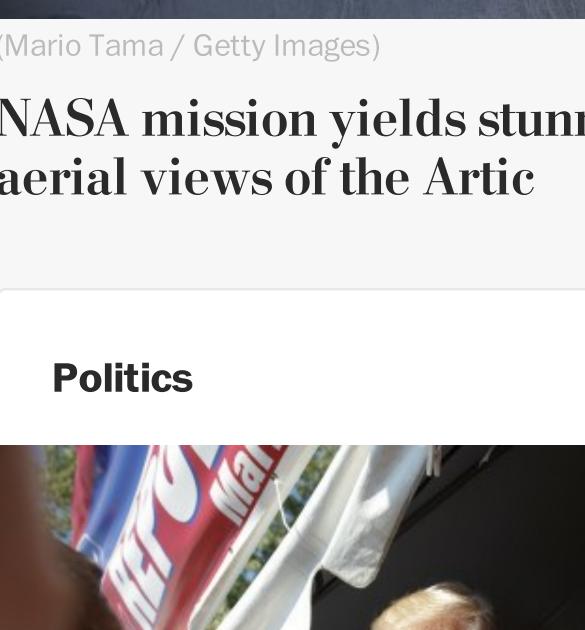

By Karla Adam • 1 hour ago

Women featured in Ivanka Trump's new book react: 'Don't use my story'

The first daughter's new self-help guide for working women drew mixed reactions from some of the role models featured in the book.

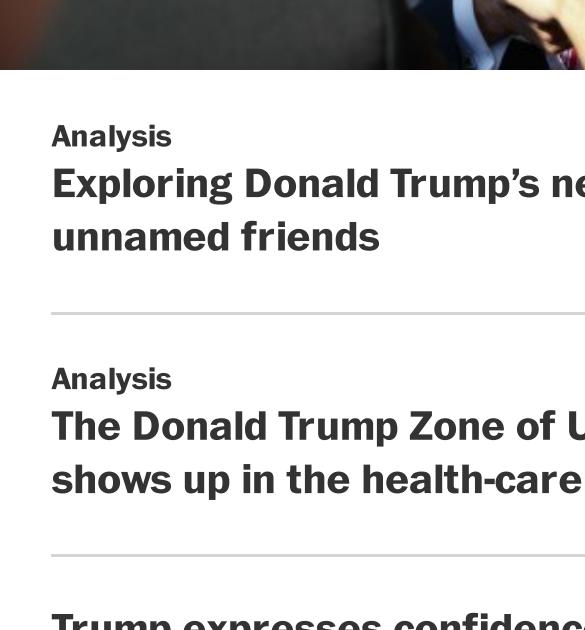

By Danielle Paquette • 3 hours ago

Two dead after shooting at Dallas area college, police say

Authorities said the shooting was believed to be a possible murder-suicide. Before the bodies were found, North Lake College had locked down its campus when police warned of an active shooter.

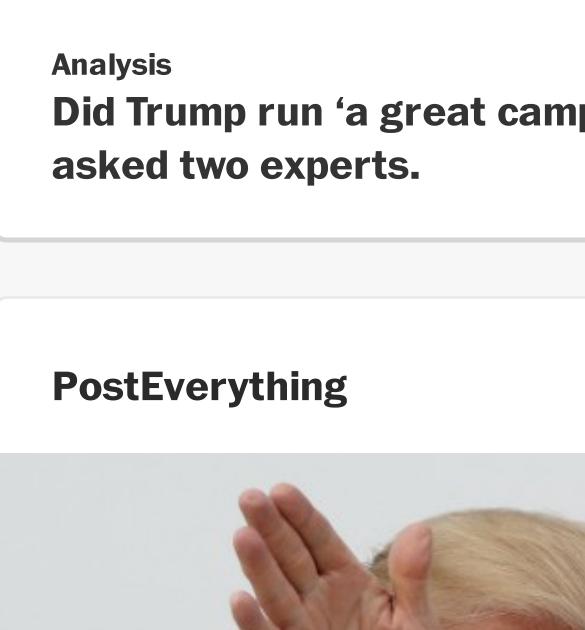

By Susan Svrluga and Mark Berman • 2 hours ago

Analysis 'What are humans good for?: Bosses worry about the workforce of tomorrow

Nearly a third of business leaders and technology analysts express "no confidence" that education and job training in the United States will evolve rapidly enough to match demands.

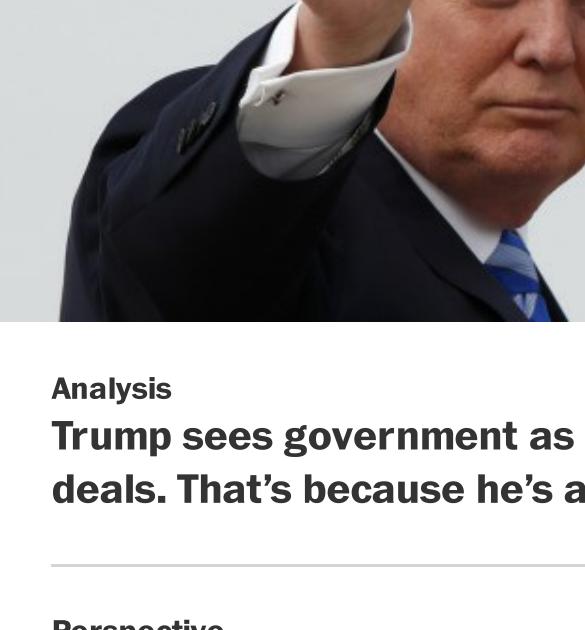

By Danielle Paquette

Analysis Audio clip of robot as Trump may portend future of fake human voices

A perfect vocal replication of President Trump — or anyone else — could be only a few years away, experts say.

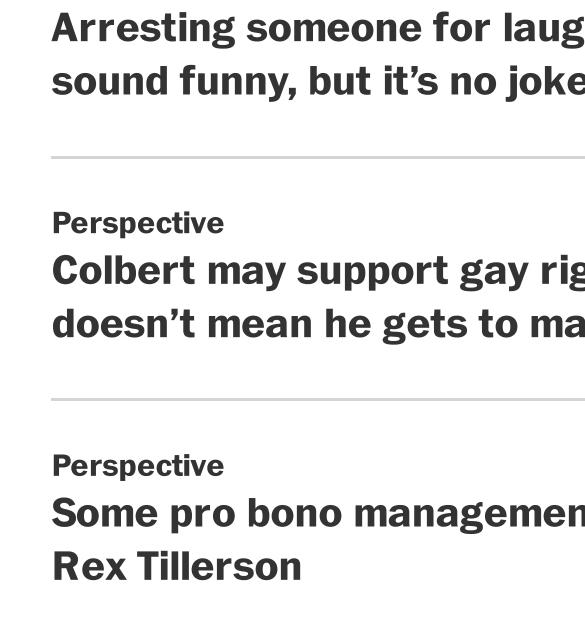

By Avi Selk

Analysis Nancy Pelosi says abortion is 'fading' as an issue for Democrats. The opposite is true for conservatives.

Since Republicans swept control of a majority of state legislatures in 2010, states have enacted more than 350 abortion restrictions.

By Amber Phillips

Chat Transcript Readers weigh in on the tyranny of cilantro

Plus, Washington Post food critic Tom Sietsema addresses how to deal with awkward restaurant encounters and pesky barflies.

By Tom Sietsema

• Explore the 2017 Spring Dining Guide

'Other: Mixed Race in America'

The long legacy of 'passing' in America

Episode 3 of this week-long podcast focuses on Anita Hemmings, Vassar College's first African American graduate. She passed as white most of her time on campus until her roommate hired a private investigator.

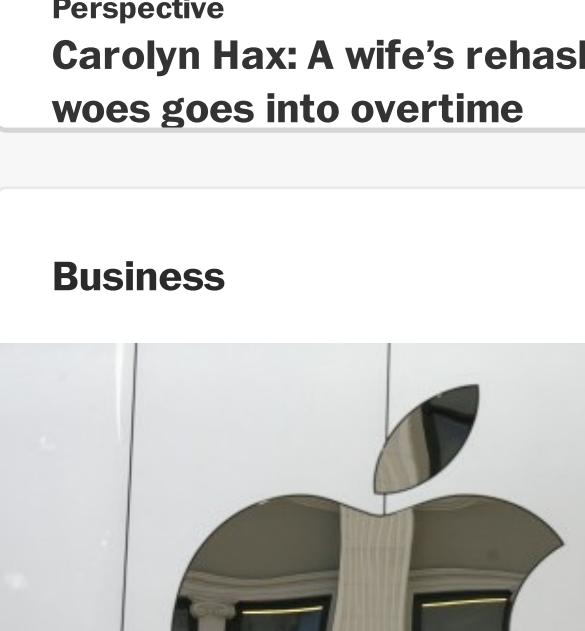

By Alex Laughlin

Share news tips with us confidentially

Do you have information the public should know? Here are some ways you can securely send information and documents to Post journalists.

Learn more »

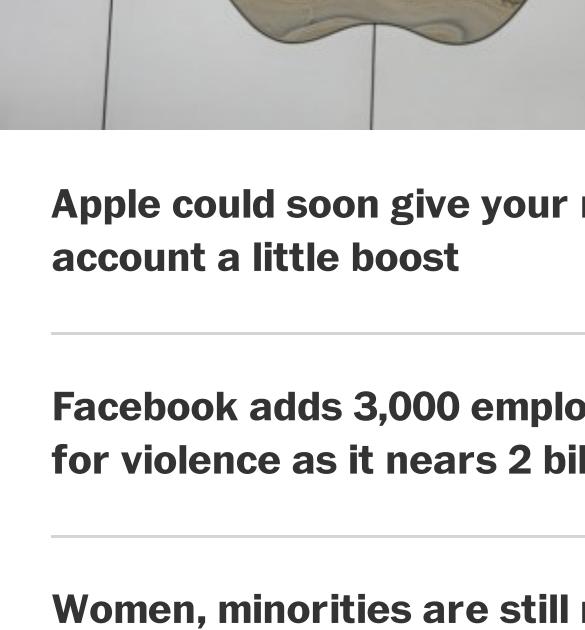

In Sight

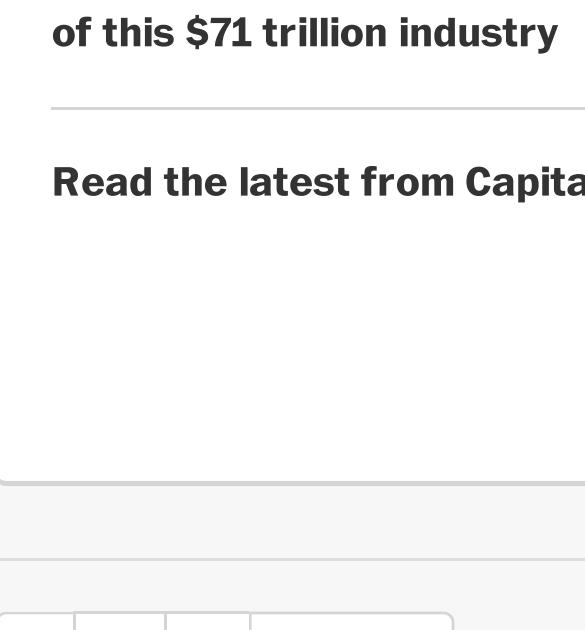

One photographer's view of President Trump's first 100 days

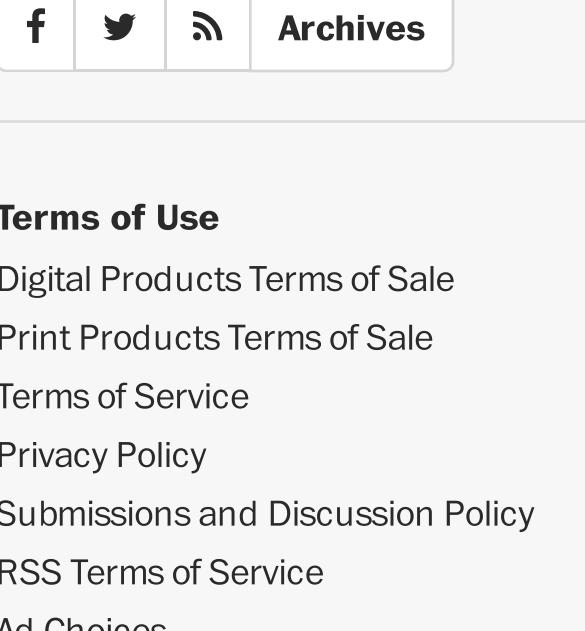

Analysis What it'll take to renegotiate NAFTA

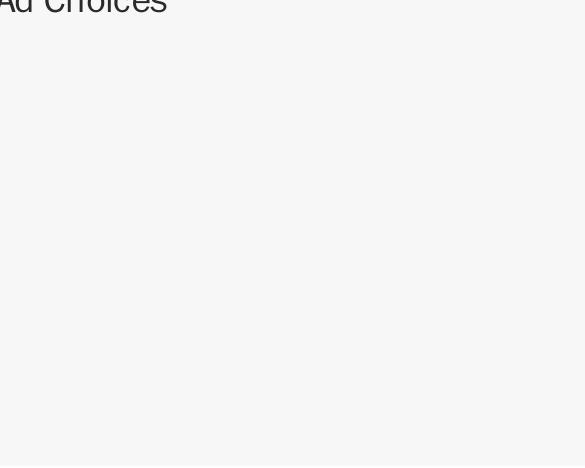

Analysis The Donald Trump Zone of Uncertainty shows up in the health-care debate

Analysis Trump expresses confidence in chances of an Israeli-Palestinian peace deal but says U.S. can't force it

Analysis Did Trump run 'a great campaign'? We asked two experts

Analysis Trump sees government as a series of deals. That's because he's an oligarch.

Perspective Arresting someone for laughing may sound funny, but it's no joke

Perspective Colbert may support gay rights, but that doesn't mean he gets to make gay jokes

Perspective Some pro bono management advice for Rex Tillerson

Lifestyle Martha is back on 'The Americans,' and Alison Wright has finally arrived

For convenience-minded road-trippers, the Airstream mystique is in a smaller package

How to support a 6-year-old who needs structure in a two-home setup

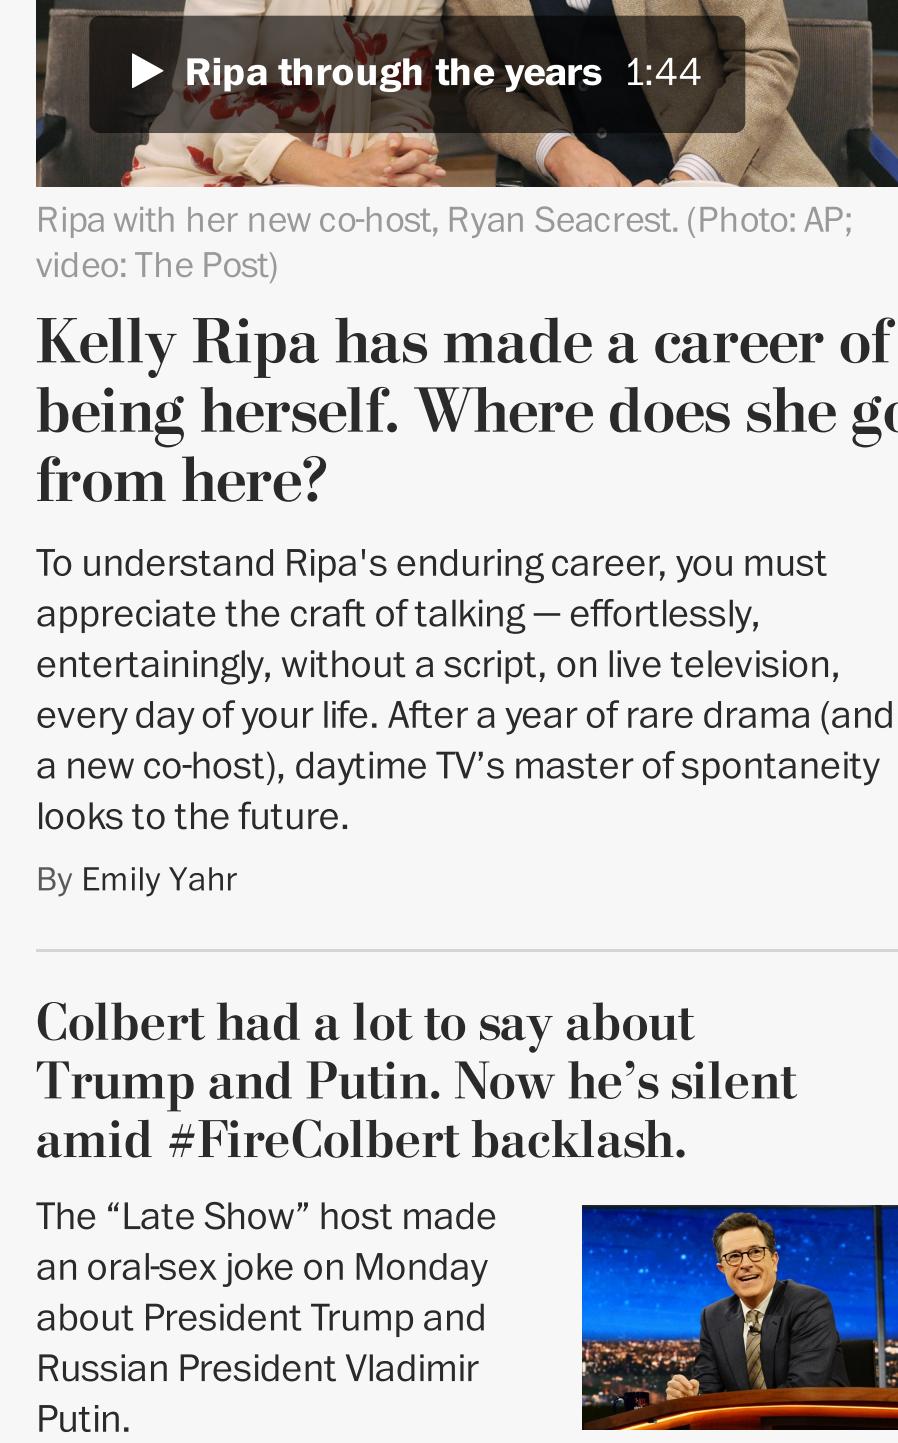

Perspective Carolyn Hax: A wife's rehashing of work woes goes into overtime

Business Apple could soon give your retirement account a little boost

Facebook adds 3,000 employees to screen for violence as it nears 2 billion users

Women, minorities are still nearly shut out of this $71 trillion industry

Read the latest from Capital Business

Ripa with her new co-host, Ryan Seacrest. (Photo: AP; video: The Post)

Kelly Ripa has made a career of being herself. Where does she go from here?

To understand Ripa's enduring career, you must appreciate the craft of talking — effortlessly, entertainingly, without a script, on live television, every day of your life. After a year of rare drama (and a new co-host), daytime TV's master of spontaneity looks to the future.

By Emily Yahr

Colbert had a lot to say about Trump and Putin. Now he's silent amid #FireColbert backlash.

The "Late Show" host made an oral-sex joke on Monday about President Trump and Russian President Vladimir Putin.

By Kristine Phillips • 57 minutes ago

Marine recruit needed skin grafts to treat chemical burns from hazing at boot camp, documents reveal

The latest revelation of hazing at Parris Island, S.C., is part of a history that includes dozens of cases of abuse against recruits in the past five years, including the death of Pvt. Raheel Siddiqui last year.

By Dan Lamothe

What happens if the House GOP health bill actually passes? Then it gets really ugly.

By Paul Waldman

The Democrats haven't learned from their defeats

By Ed Rogers

Theresa May makes explosive charge: E.U. officials are meddling in Britain's upcoming election

Tensions between the continent and Britain have escalated over looming talks about the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the European Union.

By Karla Adam • 1 hour ago

Women featured in Ivanka Trump's new book react: 'Don't use my story'

The first daughter's new self-help guide for working women drew mixed reactions from some of the role models featured in the book.

By Danielle Paquette • 3 hours ago

Two dead after shooting at Dallas area college, police say

Authorities said the shooting was believed to be a possible murder-suicide. Before the bodies were found, North Lake College had locked down its campus when police warned of an active shooter.

By Susan Svrluga and Mark Berman • 2 hours ago

Analysis 'What are humans good for?: Bosses worry about the workforce of tomorrow

Nearly a third of business leaders and technology analysts express "no confidence" that education and job training in the United States will evolve rapidly enough to match demands.

By Danielle Paquette

Audio clip of robot as Trump may portend future of fake human voices

A perfect vocal replication of President Trump — or anyone else — could be only a few years away, experts say.

By Avi Selk

Analysis Nancy Pelosi says abortion is 'fading' as an issue for Democrats. The opposite is true for conservatives.

Since Republicans swept control of a majority of state legislatures in 2010, states have enacted more than 350 abortion restrictions.

By Amber Phillips

Chat Transcript Readers weigh in on the tyranny of cilantro

Plus, Washington Post food critic Tom Sietsema addresses how to deal with awkward restaurant encounters and pesky barflies.

By Tom Sietsema

• Explore the 2017 Spring Dining Guide

'Other: Mixed Race in America'

The long legacy of 'passing' in America

Episode 3 of this week-long podcast focuses on Anita Hemmings, Vassar College's first African American graduate. She passed as white most of her time on campus until her roommate hired a private investigator.

By Alex Laughlin

Share news tips with us confidentially

Do you have information the public should know? Here are some ways you can securely send information and documents to Post journalists.

Learn more »

Visual Stories

One photographer's view of President Trump's first 100 days

What it'll take to renegotiate NAFTA

Exploring Donald Trump's network of unnamed friends

The Donald Trump Zone of Uncertainty shows up in the health-care debate

Trump expresses confidence in chances of an Israeli-Palestinian peace deal but says U.S. can't force it

Did Trump run 'a great campaign'? We asked two experts

Trump sees government as a series of deals. That's because he's an oligarch.

Arresting someone for laughing may sound funny, but it's no joke

Colbert may support gay rights, but that doesn't mean he gets to make gay jokes

Some pro bono management advice for Rex Tillerson</