Attack in Paris Casts a Shadow as France's Election Nears

By ADAM NOSSITER

- The attack by a French national with a history of violence, which left one police officer dead on the Champs-Élysées, may influence Sunday's vote.
- The far-right leader Marine Le Pen seized on the brazen assault, but she was not the only presidential candidate who stood to gain ground.

In a Surprise, Trump Vows 'Massive' Tax Cut Plan Next Week

By ALAN RAPPEPORT and MICHAEL D. SHEAR

President Trump, in an announcement that surprised Capitol Hill, offered no further details about what is certain to be an enormously complicated effort to overhaul the nation's tax code.

Trump Tower Is No Longer a Focal Point of Protests

By SARAH MASLIN NIR

The president has not returned to his hometown since taking office, so opposition efforts are taking new paths, like boycotts, performance art and calls to elected officials.

Obama's Silence to End, but He Won't Criticize Trump

By MICHAEL D. SHEAR

The former president will take part in a series of events in May, but those who have been waiting for him to respond to his successor's accusations and policies are likely to be disappointed.
