Suspicions of Iran's role in arming Bahraini militants once drew skepticism. No longer.

The discovery of weapons caches adds to the signs of growing militancy that have been cropping up for years in Bahrain, a U.S. ally and home to the Navy's Fifth Fleet. Now, U.S. and European analysts see an increasingly grave threat emerging on the margins of the uprising: heavily armed militant cells supplied and funded, officials say, by Iran.

Democrats on Capitol Hill have a new and surprising weapon: Power

It turns out that Republicans need the minority party to help them avoid a government shutdown at the end of April. And Democrats have decided, for now at least, that they will use their leverage to reassert themselves and ensure the continued funding of their top priorities—going to the negotiating table.

Judge to Trump: No protection for speech inciting violence

A federal judge in Kentucky ruled that a lawsuit accusing President Trump of inciting violence against protesters last year can proceed. "It is plausible that Trump's direction to 'get 'em out of here' advocated the use of force," the judge wrote.

While Trump promotes coal, other countries are turning to cheap sun power

In many countries, the price of solar energy has fallen so much that it is increasingly beating out conventional sources of power. Nations such as Chile, which aspires to be a "solar Saudi Arabia," are leading the switch to the renewable source.

At U-Va., a 'watch list' flags VIP applicants for special handling

University of Virginia fundraisers track the admission bids of children from wealthy families. The school says the group does not hold sway over admissions decisions, but their records provide a case study of what is regarded as an open secret in higher education: schools pay attention when an applicant's family has given them money—or might in the future.
